

Marta Vanduzer-Snow is the founding director of Project Change: An International Education Initiative and is an Independent Scholar based in New York and New Delhi. She specializes in Security / Strategic Studies, Political Economy, Global Governance and Comparative Politics. Ms. Vanduzer-Snow studied at Lafayette College, Bard College and New York University. Her works have appeared in Finance and Development, Bard Politics, G24 Papers. She is currently working on two book projects "Security, Development and Democracy: A Search for Growth" and "The US and the IMF: Conditionality and Negotiations". She has carried out extensive research / interviews and lectured in Asia, Europe and South America.